POLITICAL POT. POURRI.

A Recondite Review of Political Events by "Salmagundi."

The Republicans cry that there is no panic. They say that it is all imagination. They have been contending that prices for farm products were good and that there could be no panic while such a condition existed. But they were not truthful in that contention. Steadily and surely the price of cattle and all farm products are going down and in proportion to their fall the prices of the trust made goods are advancing. The factories are shutting down and millions of laborers are being thrown out of employment. Want and hunger stalk abroad in the land and the coming of winter is all that is needed to make this country a veritable hell of hunger and want. Yet the Republicans cry that there is no panic.

With all branches of government in their hands they have turned deaf ears to the cry of labor and have listened only to the seductive voice of the trusts—the campaign fund contributing trusts. The wail of widows and the screams of anguished laboring men have not had a hearing at their councils. To the demand of the poor for protection against predatory wealth their answer has been "Tomorrow." Always tomorrow. They would revise the tariff and give relief "to-morrow;" they would enforce the laws against the robbery of trusts "to-morrow;" they would compel the railroads to quit robbing the people "to-morrow." With them tomorrow means when the trusts will give them permission to do so. Body and bristles the Republican party belongs to the trusts.

When they made their ticket they knew that to hold the trusts and other predatory interests in line and to show them that they did not mean anything serious by their platform promises, the Republicans put on a candidate for Vice-President—to preside over the Senate—a member of several trusts, a trust lawyer and a man in absolute accord with the trusts. And they expect sensible people to believe that they will give the people relief. Why have they not done so already? They have had the power and the opportunity and have failed to do anything for the people. Why trust them to do anything in the future?

With every newspaper in the land, every book publisher, every paper box manufacturer, asking for a wiping out of the tariff on paper and wood pulp, the Republican party let the paper trust dictate its policy and refused to grant the relief. So with every other trust in the land. They are immune from prosecution by the Republicans, and have no fear of any of their special privileges being disturbed as long as that party is successful. Yet the promise to bust the trusts! What have they done in that line? Judge Landis fined the Standard Oil Company of Indiana twenty-nine times as much as its worth, not to punish it, but to be spectacular and to get the people to thinking that the Republicans were after the trusts to kill. Landis knew, as well as every other thinking man, that not a dollar of that fine would ever be collected. He was playing to the galleries and trying to fool the people into the belief that the Republicans were playing the devil with the trusts. But before the election even, the U. S. Court of Appeals has reversed Landis and the furore is exposed.

When the trusts get good and ready the Republican party will do something for the people, but to expect them to do anything that is not sanctioned by the trusts is worse than folly. No slave of old ever did the bidding of its master more readily than the Republican party obeys the behests of the trusts. "God help the rich; the poor can beg," is the motto of that political aggregation. Yet they expect to fool the people into supporting them.

Our own "Dear Mr. Langley" is one of that aggregation of speculating politicians and comes to the people with a bribe in his hands expecting people to bite at it. The bribe is indirect, it is true, but it is a bribe nevertheless. He says: "I got you a Federal Court, in return for this you should vote for me." Did he do anything more than his duty in this? Did he not get pay for his time while at it? Because he secured a few appropriations is that an excuse why he and his party did not do the things that the people demanded. 'Tis said of Frank James that frequently after robbing a bank and possibly killing its officers he would give part of his booty to poor and needy people. Yet that did not palliate his robbery. The few good things that Mr. Langley did do can not weigh against the sins of omission that he and his party have charged up against them by the suffering of the nation.

The Republicans have no excuse for not giving the people some relief. They had the power and the opportunity. Mr. Langley was there and one of the people's behalfers. He demanded that his party should protect the people from the trusts. Not on your dagger, my friend. He thought to fool the people by a few appropriations. Doubtless he reasoned that notwithstanding the fact that he had done nothing to bring relief to the people from the grasping of the trusts, he could lull them into forgetfulness by having appropriations made for their locality, and with an empty treasury the Republican party Congress allowed its Republican members to attempt to bribe the people by appropriating the public's money. That play to the galleries will not work. There is no reason why any Democrat should vote for Langley, and there are many reasons why the Republicans should vote against him. His position should be an insult to the intelligence and the manhood of this district. He will have to have a better plea than that. He will have to explain the absolute refusal of his party to do something for the farmer and laborer and its steady sycophancy to the trusts and to the interests.

The country is demanding relief from the oppression of the trusts and the "vested interests," and they are not going to trust the task of securing relief to a party that has had the opportunity and refused to take advantage of it, to a party that has made these conditions possible. The Republicans have been recreant to the duty the people imposed upon them and they will not be put in power again. The vampires of predatory wealth will not be suppressed by the friends of the vampires. It is useless to look to the Republicans for relief.

Jett's Creek.

W. K. Terry made a business trip to Athol last week.

Noah Johnson is progressing nicely with his school with an average daily attendance of about forty.

Miss L. D. Johnson, of Lexington and Mrs. Nancy Neely and daughter, of Cannel City, are visiting their parents, Rev. and Mrs. Elisha Johnson.

Miss L. D. Johnson wants to buy a farm in this county somewhere on the L. & E. railway and not over ten miles from a station. Any one having a farm to sell will please send description of the land and price to her at Jett's Creek, Ky.

There will be baptizing at the mouth of Jett's Creek Saturday, August 1, at 2 p. m. and preaching at the school house Sunday at 10 a. m., conducted by Revs. Elisha Johnson and James Johnson. Just a few lines in the interest of the Lord.

Oh, we baptize in the water.

The Baptists they are scorned on.

They are scorned on every land.

Because they preach the gospel while traveling through the land.

If you want to get religion,

I'll tell you what to do.

Go and join the Baptist church.

For Christ was a Baptist, too.

I hope every member of the Baptist church and a very large number of others will attend both the baptizing and the preaching. Come, sinner, come and hear the word of God.

THE BLUE GRASS FAIR.

The News office is in receipt of a catalogue of the big Blue Grass Fair, which is to be held at Lexington the week of August 10th to 15th, and we have consented to forward to the management of the fair the names of any parties desiring these catalogues who may make application at our office. The catalogues are among the handsomest from an artistic standpoint ever had by any fair association. The cover design is an exceedingly attractive drawing from the pen of a famous animal artist. It is arranged in panels, showing at the top the four classes of cattle and at the bottom the four classes of horses for which the Blue Grass Fair makes provisions, while on either side are groups of sheep and hogs. The printing is artistically done in colors on the handsomest grade of paper and it is no exaggeration to say that the catalogue presents the most attractive appearance of any catalogue ever issued for a fair. The premium list is well worthy of the exterior appearance. Twenty-five thousand dollars is given by the Blue Grass Fair and divided among the different classes of live stock in such a way as to insure a splendid show. Every arrangement has also been made for varied and excellent amusement features and the amusement program will be the most entertaining ever had by any fair association in the South. Altogether, the big Blue Grass Fair, which is the particular pride of the people of Central Kentucky, is this year outdoing itself in every way.

R. S. Crow, local editor of the Beattyville Enterprise, was here on business last week.

Price Houshelt, who has been in the army for the past thirteen years, is home on a three month's furlough.

Gilbert H. Williams and wife, of Stevenson, who have been visiting their son and other relatives in Kansas since last December, returned home Friday.

The Rural School.

The work of the rural teacher has again dawned upon us and we hope to make this year's teaching a greater success than ever before. Our good editor of The News has so generously agreed to give a column of his paper for the communication of the teachers of our county, that we hope they will all avail themselves of this opportunity of becoming better acquainted and more familiar with each other's plans of work. We realize the great need of a closer union of the teachers of Breathitt county and we know of no better and more sure way of acquiring it than through the columns of our popular county paper. In the way of a suggestion, I will say that it would be profitable to have an article each week in our county paper, stating the chief obstacles of the teacher's work. I do not mean for the teacher to detail all his troubles, for I fear they would be too many and there would not be sufficient space to print them. For every pain there is an ointment, for every trouble there is a relief and the teachers of the rural schools must unite, hand and heart for their success and the betterment of their profession. The teacher must be the center of attraction for the district. It is up to him to arouse an interest among his trustees, and also the patrons of the district. The latest problem of the rural school is how to educate the patrons of the district for the duty before them. If the father is idle, negligent and careless, the son naturally will possess the same qualities. If the mother is indolent and uneconomical about her home Johnnie and Tommie will never be late for the opening exercises of your school, but will be on time with a cleanly bathed face and a carefully combed head. Every father and mother must be a teacher if the school is what it should be.

I am located this year at the mouth of Meeting House Branch, District 18, and am delighted, so far, with the success of my school. The attendance has grown from forty-six the first day to seventy-five at present, and I am glad to report a pleasant time with them. S. S.

NATURE AND A WOMAN'S WORK

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Nature and a woman's work combined have produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. In the good old-fashioned days of our grandmothers they relied upon the roots and herbs of the field to cure disease and mitigate suffering. The Indians on our Western Plains to-day can produce roots and herbs for every ailment, and cure diseases that baffle the most skilled physicians who have spent years in the study of drugs.

From the roots and herbs of the field Lydia E. Pinkham more than thirty years ago gave to the women of the world a remedy for their peculiar ills, more potent and efficacious than any combination of drugs. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is now recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

Mrs. Bertha Muff, of 515 N.C. St., Louisiana, Mo., writes:

"Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my troubles public."

"For twelve years I had been suffering with the worst form of female ills. During that time I had eleven different physicians without help. No tongue can tell what I suffered, and at times I could hardly walk. About two years ago I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice. I followed it, and can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice restored health and strength. It is worth mountains of gold to suffering women."

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Muff, it will do for other suffering women.

We would like to show you our superb line of up to date samples of modern printing. We deliver work when promised.

Quicksand.

L. D. Howard returned last week from Mt. Sterling where he had been with a bunch of cattle for the court day sales. He reported a heavy decline in the price of cattle. He left a part of his cattle unsold on account of the exceedingly low prices.

J. O. Davis, of upper Quicksand, was shaking hands with friends in our community Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Davis is a good political prophet and predicts the panic will never cease until after Bryan is elected president next November.

We are proud of the work of our two Sunday schools in our neighborhood. The upper school convenes at nine o'clock each Sunday morning at the Hoonshell school house and a good crowd is always there to enjoy the services. In the afternoon we meet at two o'clock at the school house near the mouth of Meeting House Branch and enjoy ourselves there for an hour or more in the same good cause. We can already see the effect of these splendid Sunday worships upon our community and we hope that every citizen will be present at each service and endorse the good work. We were proud to have Rev. Paul Derthick with us a few Sundays ago and we hope to have him visit us again real soon. He is to be highly commended by the people of this county for his perseverance in the founding of Sunday schools in Breathitt county.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of South Strong. The attendance has grown from 45 at the beginning, one month ago, to 75 at the present, and the patrons of the district seem to be greatly interested in the school. On last Friday a debating society was organized and the program was carried out to the satisfaction and pleasure of all who was present. The following officers were elected, which proves the interest the patrons of the district are manifesting in the school and their community: Sam Frazier, president; Arthur Snowden, vice president; Miss Maggie Snowden, secretary; Green Watkins, assistant secretary; and Gertrude Cardwell was chosen to produce a paper of current events and happenings of the school. A full program was carried out and the young speakers were greatly pleased with their first efforts in debating and oratory. A goodly number of the patrons were present and pledged their support to the society. This is one of the best means of arousing an interest and sympathy in the community for your school and we hope to hear of every teacher in Breathitt county organizing a debating society for their schools. We invite the community at large to come and visit our school and take a part in these exercises, which will be given on each Friday afternoon.

Linville Miller is preparing to build a dwelling house.

If not providentially hindered, on the fourth Saturday and Sunday in October John H. Combs, Elias Mullins and Jasper Arrowood will meet the people on Canoe fork, near the church house.

Revs. Elias Mullins, John H. Combs and James Neace visited Turkey Creek church recently and were joined by a large audience of seemingly interested people and their generosity and kindness seemed to be extreme toward the visitors. They extended them the welcome hand to come again.

The people of this vicinity are mourning over the death of Paddy Napier, for he was kind and generous hearted and a business man, and useful in the country, therefore they are sorry to lose him. The little son of John H. Combs said he wanted to go and view the remains when he heard he was dead. He said there is now no one to give him candy and that he had lost a good friend. We hope we will see him again on some sweet shore and bright clime where his and our troubles will all be over, where we can give him the welcome hand of a happy meeting.

Notice to Democrats.

JACKSON, KY., July 8, 1908.
To the Democrats of the 23rd Judicial District:

A number of friends have requested me to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge. Others, knowing that I would not resort to the usual methods—the use of money and whisky—have discouraged me, saying that it was useless to seek an office without the use of such methods; but inasmuch as I believe that a majority of the people are honest and in favor of what is right, I have made up my mind that if the Democrats of the district will give me the nomination I will accept it, and if elected will serve the people to the best of my ability. However, if they think some other man more available, I should be pleased to see him nominated.

Yours for success,

Something Doing To-day

Friday, July 31st, is a big day with us. San Bros. show will be with us, the chairmen of the Democratic county committees of the 23rd Judicial District will meet in called session at the court house at 1 p. m., and the Greer-Combs wedding will be solemnized at the Baptist church at one o'clock.

Ice Cream Supper.

Members of Alpha Chapter, Eastern Star will serve ice cream and cake at the court house on Tuesday night, August 1st. Lexington cream will be served at 10 cents. We invite everybody to come out and make this supper a success, as it is for a good cause. We especially invite all Masons, their wives and daughters to come and take a hand and help us out.

Mrs. J. S. Pennington, Worthy Matron.

Mrs. SAM JETT, Secretary.

School Proposition.

A meeting of the citizens of the town of Jackson was held at the court house last Thursday for the purpose of discussing the best methods for the conduct of the public school. The trustees of Lees Institute submitted a proposition to the trustees of School District No. 1 and this proposition was discussed at the meeting. The Lees Institute offers to take the public school for the period of nine months upon a guarantee that the patrons would guarantee the amount of $1,100 to be collected in tuition fees outside of the town of Jackson. A committee was appointed to confer with the citizens concerning the matter and report at a future meeting. This arrangement would give the children of the Jackson District No. 1 free tuition for nine months, and the use of the college buildings and grounds, as there is no public school building in the town and no means by which one can be built this year. We believe the proposition is a good one and ought to be accepted.

Much Work--No Pay.

The opponents of the new school laws can hardly say that makes a lot of new officials to draw money from the public treasury. There are lots of new jobs but very few of them have salaries attached. The officers of election serve without pay, the trustees do the same. The clerk gets no money for the many new duties imposed on him and the various educational boards provided serve for love and not money. It is doubtful if in any other instance so complicated a lot of legal machinery is set in motion at so little expense.

Judge S. S. Taulbee has leased the saw mill in South Jackson from S. E. Patton and has added considerable improvements to same and will run it for the purpose of sawing lumber, ties, etc.

Congressman Ben Johnson has been elected campaign chairman of the Democratic State campaign committee and Robert H. Winn chairman campaign committee.

The per capita for this school year has been fixed at $3.60, which is the largest by 20 cents that Kentucky has ever paid. It was $3.40, last year which was more than that of any previous year.

Our story, "The Merry Widow," will be concluded next week. We will then begin another story, which we think is the "best ever." Begin with the first issue and don't miss a copy of the paper.

Sunday Sermons.

The subject of the sermon at the Christian church next Sunday will be "The Ideal Church." The Christian Endeavor Society meets at 6:30 and the evening service of the church at 7:30 p. m. Everybody cordially invited.

"Shall We Know Each Other in Heaven?" Will be the pastor's subject at the Baptist church Sunday at 7:30 p. m. Morning subject: "Preparations for Saving Our Town." A cordial invitation is extended to you to be present at both services. Stirring gospel singing. A hearty hand grasp.

Revival at Cannel City.

Rev. Gale Spencer, of Lexington, has just closed a most wonderful revival meeting at Cannel City. It is a mining town, and, as a rule, miners are a hard class to reach, but Gale Spencer had a miner's heart in him and he was able to draw them to his services as no other man who ever preached at Cannel City has done before.

When he first went there hardly any one came out. This would have discouraged most preachers, but Bro. Spencer went into the mines and prayed with the miners and preached to them there and thus he drew them to the night services. Not only were the young people converted but there were a great number past middle life who took the stand for Christ and most of them the same night of their conversion were baptized. There were 122 converts and the Christian church was wonderfully strengthened and put in working order.

On the last night of the services a love feast was given to the converts and all the Christian people of Cannel City were invited. It was a great occasion and long to be remembered. The crowds became so large that the skating rink management tendered the use of their building free to Bro. Spencer, which was gladly accepted.

Surely this was a wonderful meeting and we wish Jackson could have such a revival. On the closing night Bro. Spencer took pledges for $50 for foreign missions in Tibet, the last country to open her doors to missionaries.

Marriage Licenses.

The following marriage licenses have been issued since our last report:
Luther Spencer and Miss Calla Morris, both of Filmore.
Wesley Turner and Miss Lula McIntosh, both of Canoe.
John Wm. Greer, of London, and Miss Maude Combs, of Jackson.

I have on my premises four stray hogs about six months old, one a black and three black and white spotted. Marked with smooth craps and split in right ear and smooth crap in left ear. Owner can have same by proving same and paying cost of feed and for this advertisement.

HENRY MILLER, Smith Branch.

H. S. Noble, of Ned, was here Tuesday. He is a candidate for school trustee in his district without any opposition. He says no one could beat him, as he has 19 brothers-in-law and two fathers-in-law in the district who are for him.

The Cumberland river counties have already been covered this season and during the coming month it is hoped to complete the upper Kentucky river counties. By riding all over each county, up

CHAPTER IV.

The Waltz.

"DANCE with me!" repeated So-BRIDGE. The faroff orchestra had struck up in a dashing, gay Marsovian air. Impelled by the music and her glance of daring, Danielle sprang forward.

In an instant the two were whirling madly amid the "trifles" of a well-Russian dance such as has for centuries centuries been performed from St.
Petersburg's plain, to Viatka steppe, to dance of youth, ugliness, utter abandon.

Yet as they came paunting to a halt at the last crackling note of music the force of another emotional exaltation from the swift motion and stirring masses usually evoked. In five Dan-ielle's brow wore a very perceptible frown. Sonia, too, was downcast. Her rash experiment failed?

"You didn't enjoy that," said she.

"Not especially," he confessed. "Do you?"

"No. You don't dance as well as you did."

"You're probably grown to prefer French partners," he replied, phrasing the reflection on his dancing.

"From all I hear," she retorted, "you have little left to reproach me of."

"A lady went into the summer house with a gentleman."

CHAPTER V.

To the Rescue.

Nish, who had obediently followed the Joliden and Natalie at Popoff's orders until they had entered the summer house, now wriggled forward in confusion on hearing the landlady's voice.

"Hil you call me, sir?" he asked.

"I must surely ded call you, Mr. Nish?" cried Popoff. "And I told you I was certain I saw a lady, or, rather, a lady who appeared upon that summer house. Who was she?"

"I—I don't know, your excellency," tremulously lied Nish.

"You ought to know!" roared a Popoff.

"You were standing nearer the summer house than I was. Didn't you see that score. You dance a good deal at Maxims, don't you?"

"Now and then," he admitted.

"And with what sort of partners, I wonder?" she scoffed, a touch of scorn in her sweet voice.

"With polite ones," said Danilo lightly.

She whirled over so little at the remark and went on.

"I suppose you dance better with them than with me."

"Possibly," he agreed. "You see, I, too, may prefer French partners."

She ruled her dark great eyes to his, a world of meaning in them.

"Do you?" she asked, almost in a whisper.

The distant orchestra had been playing again, this time not a native air, but a dreamy, infinitely sweet Viennese waltz. The opening notes of the haunting melody, though softened by distance, were wafted nigh the less distinctly to the listening couple.

Again their eyes met. With a mutual impulse they drew toward each other. Then began a dance as different from the stilly conventional ballroom waltz as moonlight differs from a gasolene flare. With more than a hint of the free, untrammelled grace of the Slavonic dances, Danilo and Sonia began their wondrous waltz.

Throwing herself back into the strength of his clinging embrace, the girl's outstretched arms swayed like wind-blown lilies in rhythm with the music, her light step scarcely touching earth as the prince guided her through what sudden force forced back from the lips.

Then a last dreamy chord and the music was hushed. Danilo and Sonia started, amazed, as though from some vision of paradise. The widow, fearful lest his impulsive ward she might wreck her plan of bringing Danilo to her feet, danced breathlessly away to welcome a new group of guests. The prince, left alone, stared after her, open mouthed. A clapping of applauding hands aroused him.

"Bravo, bravo, my dear prince!" wheezed the ambassador, tottling forward. "What a delightful little dance! But is it customary to catch one's partner in a finis grip like that, or is it a fashion that has come in since my waltzing days?"

The old rube's feeble jest brought Danilo quickly back to earth and to a sense of everyday surroundings.

"Were you looking for me?" he asked, more too civilly.

"Only to see if you had succeeded yet in finding who the lady is with whom De Joldon is in love. She must be made to win him away from any ideas of marrying the widow."

"To blazes with that and all the rest of your silly plans!" shouted Danilo. "Don't worry my more about the widow. It's no use, I tell you. She is going to marry a Freuchman in spite of us all! And," he went on bitterly, gounded by the chagrin and abject disappointment in Popoff's face, "I'm going to dance at her wedding!"

"Going to marry a Freuchman, is she?" yelled the distracted ambassador. "Preposterous! I'll find a way of stopping it! And it is De Joldon she thinks of marrying!"

"What's that to me? I don't know who she's engaged to, and—"

But Popoff wanted to hear no more. Catching sight of Nish, he rushed upon

"I am—a dutiful—wife."

"Remember that always," she adjured.

"Natalie!" he cried passionately.

"It is true—I am a dutiful wife. If I have been foolish enough to listen to your love-making, at least I have never encouraged it. I have always refused you for conscience's sake. I am a dutiful—"

"Why remind me of the hopelessness of my love?" murmured De Joldon.

"You may refuse to reciprocate it, but you cannot prevent my telling you—"

"But I can. After this evening we must not meet again. My husband trusts me. This must be our farewell interview. Don't try to alter my purpose. I have made up my mind. After this evening I shall never—"

"Natalie, you can't mean—"

"I do. This is the last talk we two shall ever have together."

"Then," implored De Joldon, "if it is really to be our farewell interview, why must we talk here in the garden, where at any moment others may come to disturb our talk?"

"Grant me a half hour of your society all to myself. Let the talk be uninterrupted. Let us sit in the little summer house over there. See—it is empty."

They entered the little inclosed arbor. It was lighted by a string of Japanese lanterns, and two rustic chairs were at opposite sides of its round center table. There was a door at each end of the tiny room—an ideal spot for a tete-a-tete chat now that the moonlight had wooed most of the guests out of doors.

The light wicker door swung shut behind the couple. Natalie quite enjoyed the prospect of listening to her adviser's melodramatic words of a farewell and of posing heroically as a self-sacrificing dutiful wife, in half an

He had scarcely been over this when Natallie, happening to pass by on highway to the gate, paused in amazement at sight of the Marsovetian ambassador thus assuming the role of Paul Fry.

"Why, hello, old chap?" cried the prince. "What are you up to?"

"Hush!" warned Popoff in an excited whisper. "A lady went into the summer-house a few minutes ago with a gentleman. I can't see them very clearly. There's too much dust in the keyhole. But they're sitting opposite each other with only a little table between them. The lady's lack is to me, but I somehow looks familiar. The man is talking so earnestly as if he were trying to borrow money. Now he's heading across and kissing her hand, and she doesn't seem to mind it. Why, bless my soul, it's that fellow, M. de Joldion? Well, well, of all things I saw, if only the lady would turn her face, I could see her!"

"Come away, sir!" begged Danilo whose situation bursting upon his mind. He caught Popoff's sleeve, but the ambassador shook him off.

"Let me alone!" he whispered. "Can't you see what it all means? It means we've found the lady M. de Joldion's in love with, the very woman we've both been looking for! And now if she'll just turn her head a little I'll be able to see her face, and their—"

"Then you don't know who she is?" guessed Danilo.

"No, but I'll!"

"Then take my advice and don't try to find out. Let well enough alone. Come away, old chap, and—"

"No, no! There, you pulled my head away just as she was turning around. I'd have seen her in another second. They're getting up. Maybe they'll go to the other door, and then I shall be able to know who—"

"Let me do the looking," suggested Danilo. "If either of us has to play of myself in his half stilted cry.

"If—if it was you who were in there with M. de Joldion," stammered Popoff, "where is my wife?"

"Here I am, dear," answered Natallie stepping out of the crowd, with which she had mingled after her hurried exit through the rear door of the summer-house. "Here I am! What is the matter?"

"Matter enough!" cried her husband. "I could have sworn I saw you sitting in that arbor with M. de Joldion!"

"My dear!"

Natallie's exclamation was a triumph of shocked propriety.

"He was kissing your hand, I thought," went on the dazed ambassador.

"This time Natallie moved away from him in offended dignity. But Popoff insisted to throw his arm about her and draw her back.

"I was wrong," he apologized—"blunder of eyesight! I assumed her! The sorry, I—"

Attempting to understand, put in Sonia stepping forward in fear lest Natallie overdo her pose of virtuous indignation. "It seems that the Marsovetian ambassador has done me the honor to listen at a keyhole in hopes of overhearing my conversation. Sooner than disappoint him, M. de Joldion, will you please repeat to him just what you said to me in here?"

De Joldion understood. If Natallie was to be saved, if Sonia was not to be talked about, heroic measures were necessary.

"I asked Mme. Sonia Sadowa," said he, "to do me the honor to become my wife!"

Danilo stood motionless, his lips set in a white line, and the buzz of congratulations and laughter that followed De Joldion's announcement, Sonia noted his agony and said joyfully to herself:

Public Ownership of Roads.
The idea of public ownership of the highways seems to be coming to the front. It has been proposed that the city of Philadelphia purchase the right of way and the property abutting the proposed new parkway leading from the central part of the city to Fairmount park. In Milwaukee county, Wis., the board of supervisors is discussing the advisability of acquiring the title to roads in various townships to the number of twenty and improving and maintaining them by taxation.
